Bomb threat received by Kerala High Court

Sources claim that when the police used a dog squad to check the property, nothing strange or harmful was discovered.

Following a bomb threat, the Kerala High Court was placed on high alert on Tuesday.

The High Court got an email alerting them to the presence of RDX on the court grounds.

Sources claim that when the police used a dog squad to check the property, nothing strange or harmful was discovered.

The insider also stated that the police believed the threat might be a hoax.

Although four vacation benches of the High Court—three single judge benches and one division bench—are in session today, the Court is now in the middle of its month-long summer break.

There has been no interruption to the court proceedings.
